Introduction

What are the International Safeguards?

The International Safeguards for Children in Sport describe what organisations need to put in place if they are providing sports activities to children.

What is the aim of the Safeguards?

The aim is to create a safe sporting environment for all children, in all parts of the world and at all levels of competition.

Who is this guide for?

This guide is for anyone who works with children in a sporting context.

How have they been developed?

This guide has been developed based on the experiences of over 50 organisations who have been piloting the International Safeguards since 2012. The quotes and examples throughout this guide are based on their experiences. This project has been led by a Founders Group of leading safeguarding organisations and is based on research conducted by Brunel University led by Dr Daniel Rhind.

The Founders Group and the research team would like to sincerely thank all of the organisations that have made this project possible and we continue to be inspired by how people are working together to safeguard children in sport.

Safeguards

It was developed by the people who will actually be using the policy. They studied the example policy and discussed how it related to our context.

How do we involve children?

Children have a right to have their voices heard in any organisation in which they are involved. Involving children in the design, implementation and evaluation of safeguards will help to ensure that they are meaningful and promotes a culture where adults and children value what children have to say. This should also help to keep children safe. Here are some examples of how other organisations working towards the Safeguards have involved children:

Explain their involvement:

"You see in a lot of organisations it's a tokenistic declaration where children are engaged but they are not active in the decision making process and they are not actually contributing to the change because they are not given that opportunity. So for us, in any work we do, we want to ensure that if we are asking children something, then they know where the information is going and what we are doing with it."

Informal conversations:

"I try to have a chat with the children when they are all together at the start or end of a session just to check how things are going."

Peer Leaders:

"If a girl is not ready to share with the field leader she can share with the peer leader who can sit with the committee and share the information with those responsible for safeguarding."

Run a workshop:

"We started off very informally because clubs had issues around bullying. I ran a workshop with the young people. I asked them what is good about your club, what would you like to change, what difficulties do you have. You get all sorts of interesting things that come from that."

Director of Safeguarding

Empower children:

"Children can come from families where they don't always have a voice so to be able to voice your opinion at the age of 13 against someone who is older than you, that is not traditionally or culturally done. I think that because it is a bottom up approach that we are trying to do it is making the kids at the bottom aware of the capacity or power that they have to disclose. It is empowering the kids at the bottom to act if they are treated unfairly."

Programme Manager

Organisation

Group discussions:

"We engaged all the players in the academy to write a code of conduct and what the disciplinary sanctioning process may be for poor conduct. They have more ownership of that because it is something that they have been involved in. So instead of the organisation forcing rules on them, they are part of the process of development. It was the international safeguards that got me into that mind-set of consulting with children."

How do we involve children?

Having children on your committees:

“That really reinforces the message that the care and protection for them is a priority for us and that it’s something we want them to be involved in.”

Director of Safeguarding
National Governing Body
North America

Event planning:

“We involved youth leaders when planning an event. They identified risks around the physicality of some games, the potential time spent standing in the sun and the likelihood of disputes arising from competitiveness. These fears led to changes in the plans.”

Event Organiser
Asia

Use templates:

“We gave them a template code of conduct. We then get them to put their words on it. They end that session with a code of conduct that they have basically written. Everyone then signs up to this. This ensures that they are not expected to create something from nothing and that avoids them just being given a code that they have not been involved in developing.”

Director of Safeguarding
National Governing Body
Europe

Education:

"We have athlete training which is a series of videos and then scenarios which we talk through to make it interactive. That has been a huge success. We have been doing it about a year and we really were not sure what to expect. The kids have really embraced it and you realise that adults just do not talk to kids about healthy or unhealthy relationships very often, and they had plenty to say."

Head of Safeguarding
National Governing Body
Europe

Survey:

"In terms of listening to children, we just did our end of season survey and we asked them do you feel safe with your coaches. This time of year is a period of reflection for us. What has been powerful for me is encouraging our Programme Directors to make reflections on safety based on the data provided in the annual surveys of the children."

Taking steps

This guide will help you on your journey to develop, implement and embed these Safeguards.

It includes explanations of what each Safeguard means, questions to prompt you to consider relevant issues and examples from organisations that have already started putting the Safeguards into practice.

The guide has 5 steps:

Step 01:
Preparing for the journey
Raising awareness of the need to safeguard children

Step 02:
Preparing to implement
Reflecting on where you are now and prioritising your next steps

Each of the 8 Safeguards then have their own section that takes you through Steps 3-5 as below:

● Step 03:
Developing your safeguard

● Step 04:
Implementing your safeguard

● Step 05:
Embedding your safeguard

Step 01: Preparing for the journey

Step 01
Step 02
Step 03
Step 04
Step 05

This section focuses on step 1 of your safeguarding journey. In this step the activities and resources are used to:

- Inform you about the kinds of risks children in your organisation may face
- Raise awareness of the need to minimise these risks
- Encourage adults to consider what a child’s perspective feels like
- Inform discussion around the next steps towards implementing the Safeguards

By the end of this step you should have:

- A clear understanding of what is meant by ‘safeguarding’
- An awareness of the range of safeguarding issues in your organisation and in your community
- An understanding of why safeguarding is necessary in your organisation
- Considered how to make your Safeguards accessible to everyone in your organisation

Defining key terms

Somebody may abuse a child by directly causing harm or indirectly by failing to prevent harm.

Child – anyone who is under the age of 18

Harm – the negative psychological, physical or social consequences for a child

Types of abuse include:

- Sexual – involves any sexual activity where consent is not or cannot be given. It involves forcing or coercing a child to take part in sexual activities. The activities may involve physical contact (e.g. penetrative or oral sex) or non-penetrative acts, such as involving children in looking at, or in the production of, sexual images, inappropriate behaviour via social media (e.g., sexting), watching sexual activities, or encouraging children to behave in sexually inappropriate ways

- Physical – actual or potential physical harm perpetrated by another person, adult or child. It may involve hitting, shaking, drowning and burning. Physical harm may also be caused when a child is given an inappropriate training programme or is forced to participate with an injury
- Emotional – the on-going emotional maltreatment of a child. This includes humiliating, shouting or threatening a child
- A failure to meet a child's basic physical and/or psychological needs, which is likely to result in the impairment of a child's healthy physical, spiritual, moral and mental development. It includes the failure to properly supervise and protect children from harm

Safeguarding is the actions we take to ensure all children are safe from harm when involved in our clubs and activities.

It's important that all adults and children in your organisation know that children have a right to be protected from all types of harm and that the adults have a responsibility to reduce the likelihood of harm occurring.

Step 01: Preparing for the journey

It is every child's right to be safe during sport, and it is every organisation's responsibility to protect them. There are additional reasons why safeguarding is important:

“

You are not going to have a programme if you cannot protect the child. It is that core of an issue
Head of Research,
Sport for Development
Organisation, Asia

These two activities help people to think about positive relationships they had when they were children, what was good about these relationships and how it made them feel.

They help adults to identify with children's perspectives and to consider the kinds of qualities we want in our relationships with the children we work with.

Example activity:
Safety net

- People stand in a circle
- Someone begins by holding a ball of string
- They then tell the group about a person who made them feel good about themselves when they were a child
- Holding on to one end of the string, this person then throws the ball to another person in the circle who cannot be stood next to them
- The process is repeated until everyone has spoken to create a Safety Net

The group can reflect on the following:

- What was good about these relationships?
- How did they make you feel?

Example activity:
Feeling like a child

- Identify a person to play the role of a child
 - Identify a tall person to play the role of the coach
 - The coach should stand on a chair next to the child and look down on them
 - People should discuss how it feels to be a child in that situation
 - People can then discuss how it feels to be a child in their community

Step 01: Preparing for the journey

Example activity: Identifying risks

In order to safeguard children, you first need to identify the risks in and around your organisation. Some of these may be risks that all children face but some may be very specific to your context. It's important to be as honest as possible about your own situation as this is the first step in protecting children more effectively.

Category	What are the risks faced by your children?
In your community?	e.g. abuses that are particularly prevalent
When travelling?	e.g. for events or to and from your programme
In your environment?	e.g. unsafe kit, equipment or locations
Reporting concerns?	e.g. lack of awareness or confidence in the procedures
From other people?	e.g. lack of background checks, codes of conduct on how to behave around children or harmful relationships, including grooming through social media and sexting

“

For us safeguarding comes from the perspective that children have rights, and they have a right to know their rights!

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

Making your Safeguards accessible

It's important that your Safeguards can be understood and used by everyone in your organisation in all of the different situations they may find themselves in. You should design everything with everyone in mind. As you develop your Safeguards, you should listen to feedback from representatives of the groups with which your organisation may come into contact. These groups could involve, for example, people from different backgrounds or communities as well as those with a disability. This feedback can help ensure that your Safeguards are:

- Equitable: inclusive and do not disadvantage or stigmatize any groups
- Flexible: to accommodate a wide range of situations
- Simple: easy to understand
- Accessible: to children and anyone with a disability

“

We also discuss how it feels to be a child here. When I did this I got one of our coaches, who is 6 foot 3, to stand on a chair. Next to me and I say 'I am a kid, what does this feel like'. There is an absolute stillness within the room. It is trying to develop both cognitive and emotional awareness.

Step 01: Preparing for the journey

The next step

Now you have reached the end of this step you should have:

- A clear understanding of what is meant by 'safeguarding'
- An awareness of the range of safeguarding issues in your organisation and in your community
- An understanding as to why safeguarding is necessary in your organisation
- Considered how to make your Safeguards accessible to everyone in your organisation

If you feel ready to move on then you should progress to Step 2. This will help you to conduct a self-audit of where you are now as well as to think about the resources available in your community.

Step 02: Preparing to implement The next step

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

This tool is an ideal way to measure where you are on your safeguarding journey, and where you need to prioritise your next steps. It will identify areas of strength and areas in which your organisation may need to improve. It is important for you to remember that:

- This is not a test!
- If there are areas in which you have nothing yet in place then please do not become discouraged, it is great that you are starting your journey
- The more honest you are about your current situation, the more progress you can make
- The key point is that you know where you are on your safeguarding journey and that you know how to move forward

Using checkpoints

The checkpoint questions below are designed to draw out the minimum requirements (criteria) that all sporting agencies committed to protecting children should be striving to meet. Depending on the nature and contexts of your organisation's work with children, some of the checkpoints may seem more relevant than others.

Summary

Congratulations on completing the self-audit! This is another important step on your safeguarding journey.

You can now plot your overall results for each Safeguard in the summary table below. This will help you to see where you are and to plan your next step.

Interpreting your results

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

The audit will help you to identify where you are in your journey towards the Safeguards in a standardised format. It is important to emphasise that the actions that you now take are context specific and need to be tailored to the settings in which you work.

If you are mostly:

C - Then it may be helpful to start by developing your policy because this will set the tone for all of your safeguarding work. Step 3 in each of the following sections will help.

B - Then it may be helpful to focus on fully implementing your Safeguards. Step 4 in each of the following sections will help.

A - This is great but not the end of the journey. You need to regularly review all of your Safeguards to ensure that they are maintained and embedded throughout your organisation. Step 5 in each of the following sections will help.

Whatever your results, completing an action plan will help you to identify your next steps as well as to review the resources available to you.

Action plan

Think about one of your Safeguards that you would like to improve and complete a table using the following headings. The table gives examples of the actions that could be taken for organisations thinking about Safeguard 1 (Policy) who are currently at C, B and A.

	Action	Who will do this	By when	Goal
C	Create draft policy	Identify a team / individual	1 month	Draft is shared for feedback
B	Review awareness + impact of policy	Identify a team / individual	2 months	Identify gaps
A	Review policy based on feedback	Identify a team / individual	3 month	Revise and relaunch policy

Community mapping

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

Sometimes people may feel isolated in their work to safeguard children. Thinking about the available resources or organisations around you will help you to identify the support available to achieve your actions. For each one you identify, think about how you could work in partnership with them to protect children more effectively:

Are there local or national organisations who are also working to safeguard children in areas other than sport?

— E.g. a local school, advocacy or faith groups, charities, social services, the Police

Are there community resources that may support safeguarding children?

— E.g. Advocacy or faith groups, charities, social services, the Police

Are there resources which may help your work?

— E.g. Government guidance, professional networks, conferences, websites

Preparing to implement Final reflections

You should now have a good idea where your organisation is on the safeguarding journey and have a plan to move forward. The rest of this guide contains 3 further steps for each Safeguard:

- Step 3: Developing your safeguard
- Step 4: Implementing your safeguard
- Step 5: Embedding your safeguard

You do not have to follow the order in which the Safeguards are presented in this guide. You should go to the section relevant to the actions you identified in your plan. As you complete your actions, you can re-visit the self-audit and update your action plan to inform your next steps.

Safeguard 01

Developing your policy

Safeguard 01

Developing your policy

What – Any organisation providing sports activities for children and young people under the age of 18 should have a safeguarding policy. This is a statement of intent that demonstrates a commitment to safeguard children involved in sport from harm, and provides the framework within which procedures are developed. The development and review of your policy should involve children.

Why – A safeguarding policy makes clear to all what is required in relation to the protection of children and young people. It helps to create a safe and positive environment for children and to show that the organisation is taking its duty of care seriously. It also takes account of specific factors that may leave some children more vulnerable.

The self-audit will help you to identify if you have this:

C: not in place (go to Step 03)

B: partially in place (go to Step 04)

A: in place (go to Step 05)

Step 03: Developing your policy

Developing your policy is a really important step in helping your organisation safeguard the children you work with. As you start this process, don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 1:

- Make sure the policy is clearly written and easy to understand
- Include your understanding and definitions of all forms of harm
- Make sure it covers your organisation's commitment to safeguard all children in all aspects of your work
- Consult children, parents/ carers and staff as you develop the policy

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

Your culturally sensitive policy can include:

The purpose of your policy:

- The values of your organisation specifically in relation to children's right to be protected from harm. This should particularly include positive behaviours and values that you want to promote in your organisation. For example, 'We believe that all children have a right to play sport in an environment where they are safe and their voices can be heard' and 'Children should always be treated in a respectful way'
- Definitions of sources of harm; some of which may be very specific to your situation
- Contact details of key personnel and a clear expectation that they should be contacted whenever concerns about children arise

Identify your risks:

You should think about how your policy will help to address the risks in your specific context.

“

We believe that all children have a right to play sport in an environment where they are safe and their voices can be heard.

International Safeguarding
Children in Sport
Working Group

Step 03: Developing your policy

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

The following advice comes from an organisation working in South America:

Find a culturally relevant example:

"The policies that we were sent from Europe did not fit well. I got a policy from one of our partners. This was the tipping point, the team could then look at it and say, now I see what this means, let's do it."

Use experts with local knowledge:

"I think that for people to develop their own policy they can work with an expert with local expertise."

“

It was developed by the people who will actually be using the policy. They studied the example policy and discussed how it related to our context.
International Safeguarding
Children in Sport
Working Group

Step 04: Implementing your policy

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

Having a policy is not the end of the journey. If there is limited awareness of your policy, then it will have little impact. Once you have developed your policy, you need to make sure it is officially adopted by your organisation, that everyone is aware of it, and that it is making a real difference to the work of your organisation:

Don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 1:

- The policy is officially endorsed by staff at the highest level
- Staff at the highest level have the responsibility to oversee implementation
- All staff, volunteers, carers or other representatives have signed up to the policy
- Your organisation consults with children, parents/carers and staff as part of the on-going review of your policy

So you will need to get the policy signed off by your board, make sure there is a process for overseeing implementation and review, and you need to make sure everyone connected to your organisation has signed up to the policy. One way you can help make sure your policy is really effective, is to develop it at the same time as you develop other systems to strengthen safeguarding. That way it can be better integrated into everything you do. Remember, your policy is only effective if it is implemented on the ground.

Moving the Goalposts did the following:

- All staff read and sign the policy
- Children are made aware of the policy
- Parents are made aware of the policy
- The policy is discussed in all training camps

“

Our focus is on ensuring implementation of the policy at the field level. Everyone knows about child protection but some things about process need to be communicated more strongly at the ground level.

India

Step 05: Embedding your policy

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

You can work to embed your policy by checking that:

- People are still aware of the policy
- People understand what the policy means for them
- People are using the policy
- It still covers all of the risks you are facing
- The policy is still in line with other policies and procedures

And don't forget to review your policy regularly.

MTG regularly review their policies based on feedback from children and staff. This helps to embed the policy and ensure that it has an impact within and beyond the organisation.

It really helps because it says to parents we are not just saying things but there is a policy that is behind this. The more they get into the culture that my child is receiving this level of protection, the more it begins to leak into their personal lives.

Safeguard 02

Procedures for responding to safeguarding concerns

Safeguard 02

Developing your procedures for responding to safeguarding concerns

What — Procedures provide clear step-by-step guidance on what to do in different circumstances. They clarify roles and responsibilities, and lines of communication. The development and review of your procedures should involve children.

Why – Procedures help to ensure a prompt response to concerns about a child’s safety or well-being. They also help you to comply with and implement your policy, relevant legislation and guidance.

The self-audit will help you to identify if you have this:

C: not in place (go to Step 03)

B: partially in place (go to Step 04)

A: in place (go to Step 05)

The case study throughout this section comes from a sport for development organisation in Africa.

Step 03: Developing your policy

Developing your procedures is a really important step in helping your organisation safeguard the children you work with. As you start this process, don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 2:

- Include step by step guidance on what you will do if there are concerns about a child's safety.
- Make sure children have information about their rights
- Make sure that it is clear to both your staff and the children you work with how they go about reporting concerns
- Consult children, parents/carers and staff as you develop the procedures Include a process for recording, monitoring and managing concerns

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

Your procedures should include a very clear expectation that any concerns about children must be passed on to the appropriate person in your organisation to be dealt with. They need to explain how to:

- Report – How will people report a concern? For example face-to-face, telephone, form, via a peer leader, and who should they report it to?
- Respond – Will this be internally (welfare officer) and/or externally? There needs to be clarity about the point at which external organisations will be informed, for example the Police or local services
- Record – Will you use a Paper and/or electronic form to record and monitor concerns and how will people know where to access these forms?

Step 03: Developing your policy

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

You need to consider who children will find it easiest to approach. The coach may not be that person as they are often very powerful so you need to identify specific people who the children know are there to listen if they need to talk.

You also need to consider children who have additional support needs for example children who are disabled or children with communication difficulties. You need to adapt your procedures to accommodate these needs and ensure these children are protected from harm.

Internal review:

"We needed to take a look at all of these things and make sure that everything is OK and that we have a response ready should anything happen. As part of this we talked to our kids to get their views."

Programme Manager

External review:

"We looked into the various resources and organisations that were available in our local community. We discussed how the gaps in our procedures may be filled through building local partnerships."

Step 04: Implementing your procedures

Having procedures is not the end of the journey. If there is limited awareness, then it will have little impact. Once you have developed your procedures, you need to make sure these are officially adopted by your organisation, that everyone is aware of them, particularly children, and that they are making a real difference to the work of your organisation.

Don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 2:

- There is an identified individual or team who is responsible for leading on safeguarding
- The procedures are officially endorsed by staff at the highest level
- Children and their parents/carers are given accessible information about who they can talk to if they have concerns and how your organisation will respond
- People are supported during and following a concern
- You deal with complaints in a fair and transparent way that includes a clear appeals process
- Consult children, parents/carers and staff as part of an on-going review of procedures to check they are working in practice

You will need to make sure there is a process for overseeing implementation and review, and you need to make sure everyone connected to your organisation is aware of the procedures.

Include in the induction:

“We give a printed copy to every kid who signs onto a course so that makes them aware of their rights and the expectations that we have of the coaches. If the kids feel that this has been breached then we encourage them to speak to me, social worker, or the centre of the NGO. They then start to share this with other new kids and so it becomes institutionalised.”

Programme Manager
Africa

Expect disclosures:

“When the system is in place then you start to sensitize the participants and their parents. Then you have more reports. This does not say that your programme or community is less safe, it only says that there are more reports and this is actually a good thing.”

Step 05: Embedding your procedures

You can work to embed your procedures by checking that:

- People are still aware of the procedures
- People understand what the procedures mean for them
- People are using the procedures
- Children regularly feel able to talk about issues or concerns they have
- Safeguards are being considered at the start of every new project.

And don't forget to review your procedures regularly.

Build into future projects:

"We now think about it at the planning stage of a new project. We work to ensure that there are clear procedures and support in place."

Safeguard 03

Advice and support

What – Arrangements made to provide essential information and support to those responsible for safeguarding children. Children and young people are advised on where to access help and support. The development of your advice and support should involve children.

Why – You have a duty to ensure advice and support is in place to help people to play their part in safeguarding children such that they know who they can turn to for help.

The self-audit will help you to identify if you have this:

C: not in place (go to Step 03)

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

Developing your advice and support is a really important step in helping your organisation safeguard the children you work with. As you start this process, don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 3:

- Make contact at national and/or local level with relevant safeguarding agencies, NGOs and community groups
- Be aware that children with additional vulnerabilities may face extra barriers to getting help

Look back at step 2 and your community mapping to help you identify organisations and resources to support you, your staff and the children that you work with.

You can also think about the people in your organisation:

- Are there people with safeguarding experience?
- Are there people with an interest in safeguarding?
- What is the level of awareness of existing advice and support?

Making contact: “What is scary for people is actually picking up that phone and dialling the numbers of the social worker to say I have a concern about a child. So now I encourage people with safeguarding responsibilities to dial the number to the duty social worker and introduce themselves. Just by saying hello and having a conversation about what you do will help the member of staff to feel more comfortable and able to make that call when they do need advice or support down the line.”

Step 04: Implementing advice and support

Identifying sources of advice and support is not the end of the journey. If there is limited awareness, then it will have little impact. You need to make sure that everyone is aware of where they can get advice and support and can discuss how well supported they feel in managing concerns.

Don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 3:

- People with responsibilities for safeguarding children have engagement with specialist advice, support and information
- Children are provided with advice and support on keeping themselves and one another safe, including their right to be protected from harm
- Parents/carers in the wider community are provided with information, advice and support on safeguarding children
- Plan how you will support children with additional vulnerabilities in accessing the help they need

You will need to make sure that your staff, children and their parents/carers are aware of and using the advice and support that is available.

Rights-based approach:

“The children we work with are often not made aware of their rights, especially in the underprivileged communities where literacy levels are very low. We need to make the kids aware of their rights before we talk about the advice and support available.”

- People understand how they can use the advice and support
- People including children are using the advice and support
- It still covers all of the risks you are facing

And don't forget to review your advice and support regularly.

You can work to embed the relationships you develop with sources of advice and support through a range of different activities. You could:

- Organise a conference or workshop with local organisations to bring people together
- Facilitate a regular online discussion group
- Highlight the available advice and support at staff meetings and share experiences of how using this has helped to safeguard children

Networks:

"This is why I am excited about this project because it is creating networks that we can tap into and share resources. This should open up some opportunities that just would not exist if we were trying to do this on our own."

Safeguard 04

Minimising risk

What – Measures to assess and minimise the risks to children.

Why – Some people, who work or seek to work in sport in a paid or voluntary capacity, pose a risk to children. Children are also at risk when placed in unsuitable places or asked to participate in unsuitable activities, including age-inappropriate activities, over-training and through unrealistic expectations being placed on them. It is possible to minimise these risks by putting safeguards in place.

The self-audit will help you to identify if you have this:

C: not in place (go to Step 03)

B: partially in place (go to Step 04)

A: in place (go to Step 05)

Step 03

Developing your strategies to minimise risk

Minimising the risks in your organisation is a really important step in helping to safeguard the children you work with. As you start this process, don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 4:

- Develop risk assessments for activities, transport, accommodation and spaces. Consider all of the aspects of the activity including if there are specific cultural issues that could place individuals or groups at particular risk of harm. You could develop a standard risk assessment template for all of your activities
- Think about ways in which identified risks could be minimised. For example, consider how many adults should be supervising the activity to make it safe and whether activities should be adapted to ensure it is suitable for different age groups/abilities. Think about what levels of risk are acceptable in your context. Many sports activities will have risk that are part of the sport itself but even in these activities, levels of risk must be assessed and children must not be exposed to unacceptable or unnecessary risk
- Identify training for staff on recognising the additional risks faced by some children (because of their race, gender, age, religion, disability, sexual orientation, social background or culture). Remember that some children's additional vulnerability may not be immediately apparent and staff and volunteers may need support in recognising and managing these additional risks

It's also important to think particularly about spaces that are open to other members of the public as this could bring the children you are responsible into contact with other adults that have not been through your safe recruitment processes.

Define responsibilities:

"This was a big thing for us. What are our risks and responsibilities? Most of my staff work in the neighborhood that we work in. So if I see two children fighting at a bus stop, if I know a child is being beaten at home, what are the risks and what should we do?"

Step 04

Implementing your strategies to minimise risk

Having a strategy is not the end of the journey. If there is limited use of the strategy and few efforts to minimise the identified risks then it will have little impact.

Don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 4:

- You conduct risk assessments for activities, transport, accommodation and spaces
- Steps are taken to minimise any identified risks
- If the risks are assessed as too significant then the activity does not go ahead. For example, if you cannot find appropriate accommodation for a mixed gender group with enough adults to supervise this would create a number of serious risks to both the children and adults involved
- Staff are trained on recognising the additional risks faced by some children (because of their race, gender, age, religion, disability, sexual orientation, social background or culture)

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

You will need to ensure that staff receive training, risks are identified and that appropriate things are put in place to minimise these risks.

For example a risk assessment should be conducted before any activity with clear plans in place to manage any risks identified.

One of the organisations piloting the Safeguards implemented procedures for identifying and mitigating risks across the organisation:

- Coaches complete risk assessments before conducting sessions
- Coaches talk to new venues to highlight any risks to the safety of children
- Parents sign a form if it is ok for their child to go home alone
- Those that cannot go home alone are taken into a waiting area to wait to be picked up. There is the option of a homework club for the children to be collected later on

Training to identify risks:

“The coaches had not been well trained with the skills to mitigate risks. We did some basic training around risk and that was really well received. In this programme it is fairly obvious to them what their responsibility is because they are taking children into the water. These more obvious risks can then help to start the conversation and then you can discuss other risks.”

Head Coach, Sport for Development Organisation Africa

Think about relationship risks:

“One risk we discussed was the power of the coach. Coaches can be in very powerful positions whereby they influence the development pathway and these powerful relationships can become abusive. We addressed this through creating other ways of reporting concerns and ensuring that decisions are made by groups and not individuals.”

Head Coach, Sport for Development Organisation Africa

Step 05

Embedding your strategies to minimise risk

You can work to embed your strategies by checking that:

- People are still aware of the strategies to minimise risk
- People conduct risk assessments
- It still covers all of the risks you are facing and the areas in which you work

And don't forget to review your strategies regularly.

Guidelines on behaviour

Safeguard 05

Guidelines on behaviour

What – Codes of conduct to describe what an acceptable standard of behaviour is and promote current best practice. The development of these guidelines should involve children.

Why – Children’s sport should be carried out in a safe, positive and encouraging atmosphere. Standards of behaviour set a benchmark of what is acceptable for all.

The self-audit will help you to identify if you have this:

C: not in place (go to Step 03)

B: partially in place (go to Step 04)

A: in place (go to Step 05)

Step 03

Developing your guidelines

Developing your guidelines is a really important step in helping your organisation safeguard the children you work with. Your guidelines should cover the criteria for success for Safeguard 5:

- Treating people with respect - Think about what this means in practice for example how we talk to each other, how we address each other and respect cultural differences.
Remember this is about adults respecting children as well as children respecting adults and each other
- Travelling and staying away - Think about how everyone involved both adults and children, should conduct themselves when they are away from home. Children can be particularly vulnerable on trips and boundaries between adults and children and children themselves need to be very clear. Remind people that they are ambassadors for your organisation and should behave accordingly
- Working with children with a disability - Consider how people's conduct should both respect disabled children and support them to participate in your activities

- The use of technology and social media - Be very clear about the boundaries between personal social media accounts and those associated with your organisation. Help everyone to understand that behaviour that would be unacceptable offline is also unacceptable online and do all you can to protect children from adults who use social media to access children in order to abuse them
- Positive ways of managing children's behaviour - Include positive references to how to manage children's behaviour and be clear that violent or humiliating punishments are not acceptable
- Appropriate behaviour of children - Children need their own codes of conduct, written and/or communicated in a way that they can understand, that clearly outlines how they should also behave
- Consequences for breaking the guidelines - these should be clearly stated and linked to existing disciplinary procedures. Consult children, parents/carers and staff as you develop the guidelines

Listen to children:

"I was very proud of myself. I wrote this anti-bullying policy. I gave it to some young people and they pulled it apart. They wrote seven points for an anti-bullying pledge that were far better than I could ever have written. They have done a series of stick people that express more than I could ever express, and that is now going to be our anti-bullying policy. I just need to be able to explain how magical it is to have a code of conduct written by children and you know that they are going to engage."

Once you have developed your guidelines, you need to make sure they are officially adopted by your organisation, that everyone is aware of them, and that they are making a real difference to the work of your organisation. Think particularly about the language and format that is used for your guidelines and whether these are accessible to all.

Don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 5:

- Staff at the highest level have the responsibility to oversee implementation
- People are following the guidelines. Think carefully about how all of the adults and children in your organisation know about the codes of conduct and have signed up to them.
- If your organisation is involved in placing children in the care of others, hold frequent meetings with the child to discuss their experiences
- There are consequences for not following the guidelines on behaviour (e.g., education or disciplinary procedures)
- Your organisation consults with children, parents/carers and staff as part of the on-going review of your guidelines

Once developed, it is important that your guidelines are effectively communicated to all relevant people. One key group will be the children who you work with. One of the organisations working towards the Safeguards, hosts events for large groups of children. Their Safeguarding Manager explained:

Before events:

“We send our guidelines to the children and their parents. These focus on using abusive language, harassment, bullying, respecting officials and other participants, observing health and sanitation procedures.”

Listen to children:

“We give out more guidance at the event. If the kids feel that the guidelines have been breached then we encourage them to either come and speak to me or to other staff or peer leaders at the centre.”

Recruiting, training and communicating

Safeguard 06

Recruiting, training and communicating

What – Recruiting appropriate members of staff, creating opportunities to develop and maintain the necessary skills and communicating regarding safeguarding.

Why – Everyone in contact with children has a role to play in their protection. They can only do so confidently and effectively if they are aware, have the necessary understanding of, and the opportunity to develop, practice and implement key skills. Organisations providing sporting activities for children have a responsibility to provide training and development opportunities for staff and volunteers.

The self-audit will help you to identify if you have this:

C: not in place (go to Step 03)

B: partially in place (go to Step 04)

A: in place (go to Step 05)

Step 03

Developing your process

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

Developing your processes for recruiting, training and communicating with staff (including volunteers) is an essential step in helping your organisation safeguard the children you work with. Even if your organisation has an informal culture or a coach is highly recommended it is essential that everyone is recruited to the same high standard. As you start this process, don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 6:

- Develop a recruitment process that includes an interview, references and a background check in line with local legislation and realistic to your context (formal discussions within the community may be an option if a background check is not possible). Interviews should be formally conducted with clear questions that discuss people's values and safeguarding experience as well as technical skills. References should specifically ask about how people behave with children and whether concerns have been raised about their previous conduct

- Develop job descriptions which contain statements about treating people with dignity and respect and identify people's role in relation to safeguarding. Even if a role is not specifically about safeguarding, it makes it clear that safeguarding and protecting children is everyone's responsibility
- Develop or identify appropriate safeguarding training. As part of the interview and induction process explore what safeguarding training people have already completed and where they would need further training. Where a person is taking on a specific safeguarding role they need particular training on how to manage concerns. Include behaviour guidelines/codes of conduct in the induction process to ensure people know what you expect from the start
- Consult children, parents/carers and staff as you develop the processes. Children can be very actively involved in recruitment processes including designing interview questions and sitting on the interview panel

Recognise the need for robust
safe recruitment:

“Criminal background checks are very important. You understand sometimes that when there is a lack of capacity and someone comes along and volunteers then people can be so thrilled and overlook having a background check. This is so important because maybe this person does not have clean motives.”

Director of Safeguarding
National Governing Body
North America

Recognise the need to communicate:

“There was an awareness, but not necessarily a depth of discussion around certain issues leading to good practice at all levels. There is a signed code of conduct for staff and volunteers that covers some key issues, but there was no real follow-up and a relatively simplistic understanding of the complexities of safeguarding. Through our self-audit, we saw that we needed to improve our communication.”

Step 04

Implementing your processes

Having processes for recruiting, training and communicating with staff and volunteers is not the end of the journey. If there is limited use of these processes then it will have little impact. Once you have developed your processes, you need to make sure they are officially adopted by your organisation, that everyone is aware of them, and that they are making a real difference to the work of your organisation.

Don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 6:

- The recruitment process includes an interview, references and a background check in line with local legislation
- Job descriptions identify people's role in relation to safeguarding
- Everyone has been trained on safeguarding
- Everyone with responsibilities for safeguarding has access to regular training and support (e.g., having a mentor)
- Staff at the highest level have the responsibility to oversee implementation
- Your organisation consults with children, parents/carers and staff as part of the on-going review of your processes

Make training engaging:

“We use a role play about a young person who never gets to play. The coach promises him a game but does not bring him on because it is a crucial game. We divide the group into 4 groups: the child, the committee, the coach and the parents. You get the 3 adult groups arguing about whose fault it is. Then you say, look, what about the child. People then begin to express the views of a 10 year old child. People say that this role play gives them such a better understanding of how every person feels.”

Director of Safeguarding
National Governing Body

Step 05

Embedding your processes

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

You can work to embed your processes for recruiting, training and communicating with staff and volunteers by checking that:

- People are using the recruitment process for example; candidates have background checks
- People are receiving appropriate training. This should be monitored with every member of staff and volunteer, to ensure your organisation is responding to people's training needs as these evolve
- There is on-going communication about any safeguarding issues which is appropriate to people's roles. As your staff/volunteers become more aware through training you should see an increase in reporting of concerns and over time an increase in confidence in managing these concerns

And don't forget to review your processes regularly. These can be embedded in other procedures such as annual appraisals or staff meetings.

Training Safeguarding Champions:

"It is about identifying your key staff in key areas and up-skilling them to champion safeguarding. If I am not here, or someone does not feel comfortable coming to me, then there are other people to talk to and to keep the safeguarding messages alive."

Working with partners

Safeguard 07

Working with partners

What – Action taken by the organisation to influence and promote safeguarding children by partner organisations. ‘Partner’ refers to organisations such as funders, grantees, delivery partners and sponsors)

Why – A number of sports organisations have a strategic and a delivery role in relation to children. The organisations can provide or signpost safeguarding support and resources including the International Safeguards for Children in Sport and other supporting resources

The self-audit will help you to identify if you have this:

C: not in place (go to Step 03)

B: partially in place (go to Step 04)

A: in place (go to Step 05)

Step 03

Developing your way of working with partners

Your organisation may work with partners to deliver your programmes or activities and you may also have partners you work with in your community. It is important to include safeguarding within these relationships. As you start this process, don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 7 when thinking about your partners:

- Develop a partnership agreement that explains your joint expectations around safeguarding and references your safeguarding policy. It's important to be very clear about which party is responsible for different parts of safeguarding. For example, what are your expectations around safe recruitment or behaviour guidelines and how will this be agreed between you and your partners? You need to be very clear about how concerns should be reported and managed and how information about concerns will be shared between your organisations in the interests of protecting children from harm.

- Identify ways to share learning and written guidance about safeguarding children (e.g., the International Safeguards). This will help with consistency around safeguarding practice across all of the local organisations.
- Identify ways to publicise information about your policy to your community, partners and members and work to sensitise them about the importance of safeguarding. Think about paper and online methods of promotion and making your information accessible to diverse groups.

The following will help you to develop this Safeguard:

- Who are your partners?
- What relationships do you have with them? (e.g., funder, delivery partner)
- What safeguards do they have in place?
- What are the gaps?
- How can you use your relationship to influence and support them to work towards improving safeguarding?

Not all partners will have all of their safeguarding processes in place. This doesn't mean you can't work with them; it provides a good opportunity to share good practice. However, you will need to set expectations of what they will need to put in place and by when.

Coaches Across Continents (CAC) have developed processes for working with partners. Similar to the process of hiring staff, partners also go through a recruitment process to initiate the relationship. Partners fill in an application form. CAC's Education Strategist said: "We select partners based on their desire to work the way we want to work, we make sure to get attitudinal, not just contractual agreement before we start the partnership."

Expectations can then be clarified:

"We require our partners to provide a written statement to commit to our policies before we enter into partnership. This ensures that they are facing in the same direction as the principles that we have for our whole programme."

Step 04

Implementing safeguarding in your partnerships

Once you have developed your approach to working with partners, you need to make sure it is officially adopted by your organisation, that everyone is aware of it, and that it is making a real difference to the work of your organisation.

Don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 7:

- You use partnership agreements that explain your joint expectations around safeguarding and references your safeguarding policy

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

If you identify safeguarding issues with a partner, you may be able to resolve the situation through negotiation, building capacity or by ending the partnership.

Negotiation:

"In one of the countries we work in, corporal punishment is widely used in schools. We struggled with partnering with a school who would do that. We had parents asking us to use corporal punishment because this is how they believe that their children learn discipline. We discussed this with the Principle to see how we could reconcile the policies. Without the partnership we would lose access to the kids but we would not go against our own policy."

Ending the partnership:

Safeguard 08

Developing your monitoring and evaluation

Collecting information regarding your Safeguards is important as it will help to monitor their use, evaluate their impact as well as to inform your future plans to safeguard children.

As you start this process, don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 8:

- Consult children, parents/ carers and staff as you develop the systems

Step 01

Step 02

Step 03

Step 04

Step 05

The following process may help you:

1. Identify an individual or group to develop your system. Knowledge of safeguarding as well as having skills and experience of monitoring and evaluation would be helpful. This could be someone independent to your organisation.
2. Identify the data which is currently available relevant to each Safeguard
3. Identify the additional data which needs to be collected for each Safeguard
4. Develop a draft and invite feedback from everyone including children
5. Create the final version based on the feedback

Consider from the start:

“We started implementing our programmes and after a while you think, it would have been good if we had a baseline when we started. We now collect feedback from the children on the programme, their peers in the community, and parents. This makes it much easier to show change”

Step 04

Implementing your monitoring and evaluation

Once you have developed your system for monitoring and evaluation, it is important to collect and use this information. It can help to show where things are working well and inform your plans for future work. It is important for you to identify and celebrate successes as well as to highlight gaps.

Don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 8:

- You have systems to monitor and evaluate your work with respect to each of the 8 Safeguards and this is overseen by staff at the highest level
- Consult children, parents/ carers and staff as you review your systems

This table will help you to think about the different questions you can ask. You could do this through a survey, group discussions, interviews or social media. The most effective method will depend on your context.

Safeguards	Possible questions
Policy	Do you know about the safeguarding policy and what it means for you?
Responding to concerns	Would you know what to do if you had a concern? How many cases have been reported this year? What types of cases have been reported?
Advice and support	Do you feel supported in your safeguarding role?
Minimising risk	Do you know about the procedures to minimise risk in your role?
Guidelines	Do you know about the guidelines on behaviour and do people follow them?
Recruiting, training and communicating	Have all new staff received a background check? How many people have been trained in safeguarding this year?
Partners	Are your partners meeting your safeguarding expectations?

Listen to children:

"In terms of listening to children, we just did our end of season survey and we asked them do you feel safe with your coaches. This time of year is a period of reflection for us. What has been powerful for me is encouraging our Programme Directors to make reflections on safety based on the data provided in the annual surveys of the children."

Identify changes:

"Before the policy we would finish peer leader meetings and girls would be going home in the dark and that's a safeguarding issue in itself. Now with the policy we know that at 3pm we have to finish so everyone has enough time to get home before its dark."

Step 05

Monitoring and evaluation should be seen as an on-going task. As highlighted throughout this guide, safeguarding is a journey and not a destination. You can complete the self-audit each year which will help you to identify progress and areas for future work.

Don't forget the criteria for success for Safeguard 8:

- You have systems to monitor and evaluate your work with respect to each of the 8 Safeguards
- Consult children, parents/ carers and staff as you review your systems

Regular reviews:

"The Safeguards keep it very alive for me, otherwise it would just slip because everybody has got lots of things to do. The self-audit and the process of implementing it has massively elevated safeguarding in the consciousness of all of the staff and this is renewed each year."
